Love, Milly & Murray

A New Comedy About Old Love
by T. EMERSON

Milly and Murray have been married for 57 years. Their well-practiced routines, revolving around constant medical appointments, banter and barbs, are the stuff of true love, which is on full display as these two laugh, play, joke and dance their way through their anniversary in their little kitchen, where a couple of sandwiches and the radio are all they need. Even though their age-related ailments are mounting, both believe that "laughter is the best medicine". While anxiously awaiting a doctor's telephone call, they replay their lives, telling stories from the past and allowing us a window into their perfectly imperfect love story. Come and enjoy this poignant and funny love story—the Heinz 57 of love—and theirs is a sauce that we can all treasure!

Native Gardens

A Contemporary Comedy
by KAREN ZACARIAS

Next door neighbors in an affluent neighborhood in Washington DC hash out border disputes and cultural misunderstandings in this timely comedy about two couples learning how to live, and garden, next to each other. Frank and Virginia Butely have lived in their lush home for decades and fill their empty nest with dinner parties and tending to Frank's prize-winning garden. When lawyer Pablo Del Valle and his pregnant wife Tania move into the fixer-upper next door, they challenge the status quo by cultivating a "native garden," planting only vegetation indigenous to the area, and threatening Frank's annual entry to the Potomac Horticultural Society's neighborhood garden contest. Captivating audiences with its humor and poignant comment on what it means to be good neighbors, Native Gardens is sure to entertain and enlighten.
